THE NEW MOVE IN WAR ZONE.

Russian troops are moving through Rumania to attack the Austro-Hungarians from the rear. Crossing the mountains between Rumania and Transylvania, they will be in a position to work far below the Teutonic forces defending the passes in the eastern Carpathians and drive a tremendous wedge into the heart of Hungary.

This may prove to be the most effective way of striking at the heart of Austria-Hungary and putting that empire out of the war.

Instead of the British and French attempting to break through the strongly constructed series of trenches and forts with which Germany has fortified its hold on northern France, the troops can be better employed on the eastern fronts, where the way for driving home a mighty blow is comparatively unobstructed.

UTILIZING OUR PHOSPHATE AND SULPHURIC ACID

In Weber Canyon are very extensive bodies of phosphate rock which some day will be utilized on the farms of this region. When the phosphate rock is ground and treated with sulphuric acid phosphate, a fertilizer which is said to be performing miracles on the wheat farms of Ohio, is produced. With phosphate rock in Weber Canyon and sulphuric acid being obtained in large quantities as a by-product of the smelters at Garfield, this state, the day may be close at hand when acid phosphate will be an important product of a plant in Ogden.

A farmer gives this experience:

"Last year a neighbor whose wheat field is in sight of my house used a high-grade acid phosphate at the rate of 200 pounds an acre on a part of his field; the rest of the field was not fertilized. It was a favorable location for wheat, and the soil was good. On the fertilized part of this field the wheat ripened evenly, and from a week to ten days earlier than where no fertilizer was used. There was also a much difference in the filling of the wheat in favor of the fertilized part as there was in the difference in time of ripening. For the past few years institute lecturers have advocated only an acid-phosphate fertilizer with a systematic crop rotation in which legumes are depended upon to keep up the nitrogen supply in the soil. The people have gradually come to this plan."

MAY BE NO STRIKE.

The Standard is of the opinion the strike order will be called off and lowing described stock, on account of assessment levied on the 12th day of July, 1916, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders as follows:

There will be no strike. One of the brotherhood leaders is quoted as saying the strike would be called off, if Congress passed the eight-hour day measure.

With President Wilson and the Democratic leaders committed to that legislation, the bill is assured passage. Then, it will be up to the railroad employees to keep their word.

The men undoubtedly prefer peace, if they can gain a part of their demands, with a promise of having all their grievances studied by an impartial body, such as the enlarged Interstate Commerce Commission will be.

The railroad managers may not accept this program with good feeling, but they will bow down to the mandates of Congress, and await their day in court, when they can set forth their financial needs.

The public as a whole will rejoice, because every one has dreaded the approach of the day of the strike.

A NATION WITHOUT IMPERIALISM.

Denmark should be happy. That is the opinion of the editor of the Bulletin, who says:

"The proposed sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States suggests that the citizens of Denmark are a rather lucky lot, compared with those of larger countries. Denmark is too small to have imperialistic ambitions. Islands can mean little to her, because her navy will always be too weak to protect her trade with them by force, or to make much use of them as supply stations. A natural pride, perhaps, operates to present the sale of the West Indies, but no great interest is involved. The Danish government, without the necessity of breeding or executing great foreign policies, can devote its attention, as it is doing, to the welfare of its people. It can make use of the resources it has on hand, and does not face the need to plunder other nations and races in order to live. If its population increases, rapidly it has no recourse but to allow peaceable emigration. Its literature, science, art and whole national life need not and do not lack vigor, but it is without the great responsibilities, the great temptations and the great vices of great states. Perhaps it, and not Germany or Great Britain, or even the United States, is the model of the future state."

JOHNSON WINS IN PRIMARIES.

In California Hiram Johnson has been nominated over a standpat for U. S. senator. The fight has been a bitter one and has tended to keep the party split between the Progressives and Stalwarts. The machinery of the party was entirely in the hands of the opponents of Governor Johnson, but the governor's strong personality won out.

On the evening of the primary election, Governor Johnson, speaking in Oakland, said:

"I don't care a snap of my finger about the result of the primary tomorrow. We'll whip the enemy in November in any event. The reason for my confidence is the righteousness of our cause, and the importance of the issue we are presenting to the people. This is the old, old struggle between property and humanity, between the counting house theory of government represented by M. H. de Young and his associates and the interest of the common people. I stand today just where I have stood for the past six years, for exactly the same things, and if I am sent into the wider arena of national government I shall stand here for the same identical things. Here in California we have written into the statutes the hopes and aspirations, the hearts and the prayers of the common people. This is the glorious story of our State and it is my ambition to write it into the laws of the United States of America."

"Does it lie in the mouth of little Frankie Keesling, or Will Crocker, to say that there are differences which make co-operation impossible in California?" inquired the governor.

FALKENHAYN'S FALL. (Salt Lake Tribune.) The appointment of Field Marshal von Hindenburg as chief of the German general staff is the first significant sign of uneasiness Emperor William and his military advisers have shown for many months. Whether the appointment was made to restore public confidence or because General von Falkenhayn was blamed for reverses, it reveals that the Germans are not satisfied with the military situation.

Von Falkenhayn was considered in the central empire a soldier of the utmost brilliancy. Despite the fact that he was a gambler and adventurer, though not an adventurer, he was chosen chief of the general staff when Count von Moltke was retired from that position immediately after the failure at the Marne. For a year Von Falkenhayn justified the highest hopes. Germany met with several serious checks, such as the halting of the drive to Calais, but on the whole the German arms were triumphant. The mighty campaign in Russia was carried to a successful conclusion, Serbia and Montenegro were put out of action and all the efforts of the allies to break through on the western front were frustrated.

With the opening of the spring campaign fortune turned slowly against the Germans. At first the turn of the tide was not obvious. Even after the gigantic failure at Verdun a Teutonic offensive was launched with terrific power in the Trentino district and the Italians were almost swept off their feet and stampeded. But then came the Russian offensive and its quick successes. Germany and Austria have been unable to act on the offensive since that time and the initiative seemed to pass entirely to the entente allies. To what extent Von Falkenhayn is held responsible for the situation was probably cannot know until the close of the war. Perhaps he is not at all to blame. Perhaps the selection of Hindenburg is an attempt to cheer the nation in a dark hour of panic. Von Hindenburg is a mighty name in the German land. His prestige and popularity are sufficient to buoy up the waning hopes of a whole people.

It is possible that there has been a feud between Von Hindenburg and Von Falkenhayn regarding operation on the eastern front. Von Hindenburg may have advised one course of action and Von Falkenhayn another. In the test Von Hindenburg's judgment may have proved correct.

In any event Germany now has her leading soldier as chief of the general staff.

WORLD'S MARKETS

New York, August 31.—The critical state of the railway controversy was again a paramount factor in the securities market today, opening prices showing a series of irregular declines. These were mostly fractional, however, except in Reading and the motors, where heaviness was most conspicuous. United States Steel lost a large fraction which was followed by prompt recovery. Other investments shares soon improved under the influence of another upward movement in Marines which established new records on free absorptions. Ralls were but slightly affected but the tendency towards irregularity became more marked with the progress of the session.

Marines, Steel and Kelly-Springfield Tires were the features of the forenoon, other prominent stocks moving in uncertain fashion. Marines lost their early gains on realizing sales but displayed a strong undertone. Important ralls were only nominally lower. Speculative specialties such as Industrial Alcohol, American Coal Products, Studebaker and South Porto Rico Sugar lost 2 points. The entire list strengthened at midday on the more encouraging news from Washington. Bonds were steady. Coppers led the general advance of the intermediate session, Inspiration attaining a new record on its rise to 55.34 with gains of 1 and 2 points elsewhere. Steel, Reading and other representative issues made similar response to renewed demand.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 31.—Renewal of efforts to bring about a postponement of the railway strike had only a transient bullish effect today on wheat. Assertions that within 48 hours Greece would abandon neutrality appeared to act as more than an offset. Speculative transactions on the wheat side of the market were on a large scale and price changes were of rapid, nervous character. The opening, which ranged from 1-2c decline to 1-8c advance, with September at $1.38 3/4 to $1.39 1/4 and December at $1.42 to $1.43, was followed by a material general upturn and then a sharp decline.

Corn displayed less tendency to respond to any hype in wheat. Yesterday's bullish crop estimates were today admitted to have been erroneous.

After opening 1-8c and 1-4c to 1-2c lower, prices rallied a little, but then underwent a decided sag. Oats gave way with other cereals. Commission houses for the most part leaned on the bear side. Irregularity characterized provisions. Most of the trading was in hard, which declined under selling pressure from eastern longs.
